

Hillsborough County Major Renovation

This major renovation project for the Hillsborough County of New Hampshire enabled the state to make productive use of a 110-year old facility.

The project involved a complete overhaul of the structural, mechanical and electrical systems of the one-hundred and ten-year-old Bouchard Building on Mast Road in Goffstown. The forty-four-thousand square-foot structure had been unoccupied for some time, and will now provide the county with an economic solution to an emerging need for space.

The refurbishment process included the construction of a new stairwell, the installation of an elevator, improvements to enhance handicap accessibility, and a first-floor fit-up for the Hillsborough County Commissioners' office, the County Sheriff's Office, and for County Exchange Services.

The building's lower level is being used for storage and warehousing.
